LARRY MALUMA is in the country from Australia where he believes there is a market for African rhythms. Due to return there in two months for the Irish Rock Festival where he says he will feature on percussions to experiment,

Larry said in Lusaka this week that he was happy with the work he did there.

On the Lion Youth claiming that he ripped them off on the single "Iwe Ganiza," he said the claims were unfounded. Lion Youth could not back anyone for lack of musical knowhow, and could not play any music that could make sense. Larry claims he paid dearly to get the single released, which he says Lion Youth were not aware about. He helped get the group going, and had to lower his music to a simple level where they could catch up and produce that work they now complain about.

"That is the problem with people who want to appear in the press to get sponsorship. Can they corner me for a mere K300?"
